Potentially harmful app information- The Mappen app was designed to allow friends to track each other's locations- it sends a notification to users when their synced friends are traveling and also displays their exact location in real-time. As you can imagine, students allowing an app to have constant access to their location for display to other app users is very dangerous. Once a student installs the app, it requests access to all of their phone contacts. If the student approves the access, the app sends out an invite to all of their friends, and the cycle continues.
