Building Pathways through Peer-to-Peer Mentorship

Thursday, April 22
3pm PT | 6pm ET

Join us to meet a panel of college students who are making a difference in their communities by spearheading efforts to mentor youth in their college admissions journeys. Our guests will discuss why mentorship is important, how they were inspired to create their own programs and how college and high school students can get involved.

Connecting Passion to Purpose: Virtual Summer Programs for Students

Thursday, May 13
3pm PT | 6pm ET

Join us as we discuss the importance of taking a step back from the rigor and routine of the academic year and why it's critical for students to step into their talents and interests during the summer. With so many virtual offerings available just a click away, students should see the summer as a time to explore their passions and build upon their interests in order to sharpen their power skills for the future. We will highlight several immersive virtual programs and opportunities available to middle and high school students that will pack the most into summer break.
